INTRODUCTION

I am an undergraduate student at The King’s University in Edmonton, Alberta, pursuing a Bachelor of Science in Computing Science with a minor in Psychology. I am passionate about exploring the intersection of technology and human behavior, and I am eager to apply my computing science skills in fields where they can enhance psychological research and practices. My goal is to leverage my knowledge to contribute to innovative solutions that improve understanding of human cognition and behavior. I am driven to make a positive impact in both the tech and psychology domains and am excited about opportunities that align with these ambitions.
